Gazbia Sirry : lust for color (Book, 1998) [WorldCat.org]
Throughout her career, she has been concerned with the fusion of the personal with the social or political, describing her work as embodying her sensual relationship with color and her obsession with the human condition. Sirry was a member of the Group of Modern Art in the 1950s, which adopted the ideology of modernization. Sirry's contribution was to portray nationalist subjects (such as martyrdom against British occupation and peasant mothers) in a figurative style inspired by pharaonic ...
