On the roof of a very tall building are four men; one is asian, one is mexican, one is black, and the last one is white. The asian walks to the ledge and says, "This is for all my people" and jumps off the roof. Next, the mexican walks to the ledge and also says, "This is for all my people" and then he jumps off the roof. Next is the black guy's turn. The black guy walks to the ledge and says, "This is for all my people" and then throws the white guy off the roof.

These "Chinese" proverbs had me in stitches - they have many an interesting, funny (and occasionally rather rude) nuggets of wisdom to share with the world through some of their traditional proverbs.The key with these is that if you don't get them the first time, read them again - many are a play on words, which may not be instantly obvious.

31 Hysterical and Rather Rude "Chinese" Proverbs
In most African societies, african riddles and jokes are a form of art. They are simple and elegant ways to communicate a lot of meaning in few words. Riddles play an important role in the traditions of African speech and conversation. Like proverbs, African riddles are brief and based on observations of nature. However, with riddles, the listener is expected to guess the answer to a question ...
