Master Spades is the Holy Grail of advanced spades play. Many of the concepts presented here are simply not available from any other source. The book is comprised of three sections; Techniques, Strategy, and How to Read a Spades Hand. Techniques focuses on strong individual plays, generally in a single suit, and shows readers how to get maximum benefit from their cards. Strategy uses the concepts from Techniques in part 1, and builds upon this foundation to show how to best handle a deal as ...

Having no cards in a non-trump suit makes your spades stronger as well, since you can trump on any trick played in that suit. Conversely, a "balanced hand", with at least three cards in it of every suit, is weak because it your opportunities for playing trumps are limited. As a rule of thumb, you can bid one trick for every spade over your first three. So if you have five spades, add two to your bid. Advanced players use an imbalance in one or more suits to their advantage.

The primary rule when playing nil is this: play as high as you can without playing higher than any card currently played. Exception 1: if you and your partner are both out of a suit and you think you might have trouble in spades, trump a RHO lead with a medium spade and hope your partner can cover.

Advanced Card Strategies for Spades : Playing a Nil Hand ...

When playing Spades it is important to always remember your partner. By paying close attention to what cards fall early in the game you can play to your partner's strength and they can play to yours. At its best, both you and your partner's hands will be stronger than they ever could be individually and this strength is both satisfying to grasp and the secret to success in the game of Spades.

The player to dealer's left leads any card except a spade to the first trick. Each player, in turn, clockwise, must follow suit if able; if unable to follow suit, the player may play any card. A trick containing a spade is won by the highest spade played; if no spade is played, the trick is won by the highest card of the suit led. The winner of each trick leads to the next. Spades may not be led until either some player has played a spade (on the lead of another suit, of course), or the ...
