- Mexico will be involved in a presidential election process in the middle of 2018, and unless negotiations of NAFTA are completed within 2017 or the first quarter of 2018, the political scenario may complicate the renegotiation by Mexico, since a negative perspective of NAFTA may become a political flag for one or more presidential candidates in this country. Latest statements from both governments indicate that negotiations should be completed by the end of 2017, although ...

Beyond Mexico's domestic policies, NAFTA's shortcomings are due to its narrow productivist logic. To remedy this problem, North American governments should address NAFTA's deficient social institutionality through a series of measures that would target some of the most pressing social issues, among which immigration, agriculture and resource transfers. Although NAFTA is not the solution to all of Mexico's problems, it is embedded in the process of regional economic integration and has ...

NAFTA's Developmental Impact on Mexico: Assessment and ...

From a manufacturing perspective, the effects of the NAFTA on Mexico can, in general terms, be seen as a positive. Following the passage of the treaty, many foreign manufacturing firms set up shop within the nation's borders. As a result, manufactured exports, as a percentage of the country's gross domestic product (GDP), rose from 8.56 percent in 1993 to 36.95 percent in 2013. Although NAFTA is cited as the cause for the loss of 44,000 domestic manufacturing jobs since its inception ...
