Motivation: Theory, Research, and Applications (with ...

Motivation is very much needed for employees in an organisation to be productive, and management or leadership style has an important role to play. Motivation is not always based on financial rewards, but non-financial rewards methods can also be used to derive the best out of employees. Although individuals have their expectations, it is the leadership's responsibility to develop and align with theories that are suitable to bring job satisfaction to their employees. However, there is no ...
