The Paraná Basin is a large cratonic sedimentary basin situated in the central-eastern part of South America. About 75% of its areal distribution occurs in Brazil, from Mato Grosso to Rio Grande do Sul states. The remainder area is distributed in eastern Paraguay, northeastern Argentina and northern Uruguay. The shape of the depression is roughly elliptical and covers an area of about 1,500,000 km2. The Paraná River, from which the Paraná Basin derived its name, flows along the ...

Basin development commenced with a Triassic-Jurassic synrift megasequence related to the separation of North and South America in the Caribbean. Basin development continued in the Cretaceous as a back-arc megasequence behind the Andean subduction zone. Marine deposition was abruptly terminated during the early Maastrichtian due to final accretion of the Western Cordillera.
