^Oral Language is the child's first, most important, and most frequently used structured medium of communication. It is the primary means through which each individual child will be enabled to structure, to evaluate, to describe and to control his/her experience. In addition, and most significantly, oral language is the primary mediator of culture, the way in which children locate themselves ...

Five Components of Effective Oral Language Instruction

Once oral language objectives become a consistent aspect of the curriculum, teachers must document evidence of this. Buckley (1992) contends that to best evaluate oral language, teachers should use taped samples. Several teachers in the PDS were already using audio and video tapes to record oral language events in their classroom. Based on ...
