Yet what has come to stand for “Western” writing is the myth of the wagon train and the lone gunman. In the Portable Wester Reader, William Kittredge has assembled stories, poems, essays, and excerpts that transcend the Western myth and explore the vast range of Western experience. With selections from more than seventy authors, and an introduction and headnotes by William Kittredge.

But the Western reader receives information in a different way, not better or superior, but there are differences in culture and the understanding of other cultures. For instance, there is a focus on women, particularly two women characters, Mama Hessa and Ghanema Al Tarrof. Those two characters — who I wrote spontaneously, since they're from our reality — didn't draw much attention ...
